

ANDREW GILLET

Combining traditional techniques with digital media, realist painter A. R. Gillet's work is a must see. Playing with background and foreground as well as contrasting colour schemes, Gillet's work jumps off the canvas and seems to immerse itself in the 3D view of life. Find the painting for that special room in your home or office. Ask Gillet about his thematic collections featuring: sports induced sets, vivid pop culture prints, and more recently Gillet developed a body of work in time for Skate Canada.

Andrew Gillet is a Canadian realist artist who primarily paints antique hockey and baseball equipment, table hockey players and additional subject matter in his many commissioned works. In each new series of Andrew's work, there is a vibrancy generated through his constant experimentation that brings a fresh energy to each new canvas. A master of traditional painting methods and an establish photorealist artists, Andrew's work has graduated into a more expressive style of brushwork that retains incredible life-like representation. His work can be seen at his studio gallery on the upper floor of the Covent Garden Market in London ON.
